Q30) B) Write a paragraph on the hermit's practical advice and how he helped the king to know the answers to his three questions.

A30) The hermit's advice to the King was simple and practical. He taught the King that the most important time is the present, because it is the only time we have power to act. The most important person is the one you are with at a particular moment, as no one knows if they will interact with anyone else again. Finally, the most important business is to do that person good, because we were sent into this life for that purpose alone. The hermit didn't give direct, abstract answers, but instead showed the answers through his actions. By digging the ground for the hermit, the King found the most important time was the present. By caring for the wounded man, the most important person was the man, and the most important business was tending to him. This practical demonstration helped the King understand the answers to his three questions.

Q31) B) Imagine you are a friend of Gopal in the lesson "Gopal and the Hilsa Fish". Write a diary entry about how he behaved on the day when he brought the Hilsa to the court.

A31)

Diary Entry

Date: [Any Date]

Dear Diary,

I still can't believe what happened today at the court! My friend Gopal is always full of tricks, but today he took it to another level. The King had challenged everyone to bring a hilsa fish to the court without anyone talking about it, and Gopal actually succeeded!

He showed up looking absolutely ridiculous—his face was half-shaven, his clothes were torn rags, and ashes were smeared all over him. He walked into the court holding a huge hilsa fish, and no one, not even the King, could talk about the fish. Everyone was too busy laughing and asking him about his appearance! "Why are you dressed like a madman?" "Are you out of your mind?" The fish was completely ignored.

He is so clever. He managed to follow the challenge perfectly, proving to the King that no one could avoid the topic of the hilsa unless a distraction was bigger than the fish itself. It was the funniest thing I've ever witnessed. Gopal won the challenge easily.
