Section D: Composition

20. A) Conversation between Gopal and the King

King: (Staring in astonishment) Who is this bizarre-looking fellow? Guards, what is the meaning of this?

Gopal: (Bowing dramatically) Your Majesty, it is I, Gopal! I have successfully accepted your challenge.

King: Gopal? It cannot be! You look like a madman! Is this some kind of joke?

Gopal: (Holding up the Hilsa fish) The joke, my King, is that for the past one hour, I have carried this large Hilsa fish through the entire city, and not a single person spoke about it. They were all too busy talking about my appearance!

King: (Starts to chuckle, which turns into a hearty laugh) So that was your plan! You made yourself the center of attention to stop people from discussing the Hilsa fish. Brilliant! Truly brilliant, Gopal. You have more than proven your wit. The challenge is met!

20. B) Paragraph on Loyal Friendship between Man and Animal

The loyalty between a human and their animal is a profound and selfless bond. A perfect example of this is the story of the dog Hachiko from Japan. Hachiko would accompany his owner, a professor, to the train station every day and return to greet him in the evening. Tragically, the professor passed away at work and never returned. Yet, for the next nine years, Hachiko faithfully returned to the station at the same time every single day, waiting for his master who would never come back. This incredible display of loyalty, until his own death, transformed Hachiko into a national symbol of devotion. His story demonstrates that an animal's love is not conditional; it is a pure, unwavering commitment that often stands as a powerful example of true friendship.
